Notes

His birth year is speculated from a confirmation record of Anna? Schmutz, age 44 in 1721 with some of their children. If this is true, they could have had children in Tomerdingen or elsewhere because the film doesn't begin until 1705 and is hard to read in the first few years.

Father Almendinger's Stammbaum shows him born in 1681 in Tomerdingen.

Josef is listed as a Soldier on the page of his son Josef (p. 404)

No family sheet for this family though.

From 1701 to 1714 there was a War of Spanish Succession. The King of Spain, Charles II, the last Hapsburg, died with no heir in 1700. France and Austria went to war trying to claim that throne and fighting along the Danube was apparently heavy. Although most of Germany sided with Austria, Bavaria fought on the side of the French! [<http://www.historyworld.net/wrldhis/PlainTextHistories.asp?historyid=ad06>] against Austria.

"Charles II....his possessions to Philip of Anjou, grandson of his half-sister and King Louis XIV of France. Philip thereby became Philip V of Spain and since he was also the younger son of the Dauphin of France, Philip was indirectly in the line of succession of the French throne. The specter of the multi-continental empire of Spain passing under the control of Louis XIV provoked a massive coalition of powers to oppose the Duc d'Anjou's succession. The war began slowly as Leopold I, Holy Roman Emperor fought to protect the Austrian Habsburg claim to the Spanish inheritance."

Tomerdingen was in the thick of things. Was Josef therefore a professional soldier who moved into Tomerdingen with troops or was he living there and joined in the fight?

From the English translation of Google Wikipedia German version: "War, billeting, looting and arson have Tomerdingen struck again and again. 1209 (Friedrich II.) und 1246 („Pfaffenkönig“ Heinrich Raspe) wurde das Dorf eingeäschert. 1209 (Friedrich II.) and 1246 ("priest king" Henry Raspe) was cremated the village. 1635 im Dreißigjährigen Krieg waren nur noch 45 Häuser bewohnt, die Felder konnten nicht bearbeitet werden, weil kein Zugvieh da war; in diesen Jahren raffte auch die Pest viele Einwohner dahin. 1635 in the Thirty Years War were only 45 inhabited houses, the fields could not be processed because no draft animals was there in those years, many people picked the plague there. 1688 wurde der Ort in den französischen Raubkriegen verwüstet und mit schweren Kontributionen belastet. 1688, the place in the French wars of plunder devastated and burdened with heavy contributions. 1704 hatte das Dorf im Spanischen Erbfolgekrieg hart unter umfangreichen Einquartierungen zu leiden. 1704 in the village had the War of Spanish Succession hard quartering suffered extensive. There was a Benedictine Abbey in Elchingen which was dissolved in 1803. Until that time Tomerdingen and Dornstadt fell under the auspices of this abbey, although all fell under the jurisdiction of the free city of Ulm.
